Homeward Bound is rebuilding Mill Street Center in San Rafael. Operated for more than 30 years, Mill Street Center is the year-round entry emergency shelter for adults facing a crisis of homelessness in Marin, offering a critical lifeline for hundreds of people each year to begin their journeys back home.

Constructed in the 1960s, Mill Street Center was originally an office space before becoming a homeless shelter in 1986. Our vision for the future Mill Street Center will have four floors, including a 60-bed emergency shelter and two upper floors with 32 units of permanent supportive housing. The new facility will offer a more purpose-built and safe environment, including rooms for youth, gender-neutral spaces, a computer lab, and a vastly improved kitchen.

THE NEED FOR SHELTER AND HOUSING IN MARIN

The most recent homeless census counted 1,117 unhoused people in Marin, with 63% living on the streets, in abandoned buildings, encampments, vehicles, or boats. This includes 257 chronically homeless individuals who have spent a year, or in many cases, far longer, living without housing while also trying to manage one or more disabilities.

Marin is among the least affordable rental markets in the U.S., with the 2019 Fair Market Rent for a basic studio priced at $2,069 per month.* The current need for affordable housing in Marin is greater than ever, especially for people bearing the hardships of homelessness combined with medical problems and pressing poverty.

SOLVING THE CRISIS

The new Mill Street Center will provide a type of housing not currently available in Marin, offering services designed to help people who struggle to find stability and maintain independence, with round-the-clock staff for added support. Researchers add up the expense of serving one individual on the streets at over $80,000 a year, owing to police interactions, hospitalizations, and emergency room visits. Providing these same individuals with a permanent supportive home costs less than half as much. Tenants in these 32 small apartments will pay affordable rents, and each floor will have a shared kitchen and community room. In the shelter component, improvements will boost efficiency and continue providing people in crisis with a safe place to sleep, eat, do laundry, receive counseling, conduct housing searches, secure an income source, and stabilize.

COSTS AND NEXT STEPS:

To rebuild Mill Street Center with added housing units will cost $15.6 million. We have already raised over $10 million, including $4.5 million from the California Homeless Emergency Aid Program, $1.5 million from Partnership HealthPlan, $1.5 million from the State’s No Place Like Home program, $1.5 million from Marin Community Foundation, and $1 million from the Nancy H. and James Kelso Fund.
Our goal is to complete construction by the fall of 2021. Having managed several major capital projects—including Oma Village, the Next Key Center, and King Street Senior Housing—Homeward Bound has the experience and ability to rebuild Mill Street Center. At the same time, we will also ensure the continuation of shelter and services in Marin at a temporary location during construction.

HOW YOU CAN HELP: INVEST IN THE NEW MILL STREET CENTER

We are currently seeking investments for the below items to close our funding gap and help people move home for good. Give now, and your impact will be matched thanks to a generous $100,000 challenge grant from Tamalpais Pacific.

$200,000 each (9) – Shared dormitory room for people to have a safe and warm place to sleep.

$175,000 – Accessible features for persons of all abilities, including an elevator.

$150,000 each (32) – Supportive housing unit for one chronically homeless person to permanently call home.

$150,000 – The new shelter kitchen to serve meals for up to 60 people a night – that’s 21,900 dinners a year!

$100,000 – Large community room for holding educational workshops, recovery groups, and movie nights.

$100,000 – Shelter dining hall, where people can enjoy nourishing meals every day at communal tables.
